

Stephen Lewis Answers Frequently Asked Questions

Here are several questions which I am often asked:

1. If I can heal anything, and only I can heal myself, who needs you, or EMC<sup>2</sup>, or the AIM Program or, for that matter, any external program?

2. What can you say to convince me to get on the AIM Program?

3. Can you comment on other forms of Energetic Balancing? (The implied question here is: "If we do need help, why should we choose the AIM Program over other energetic balancing programs, some of which are less expensive?")

All three questions really could be combined as "Why do I need any help all, and if I do need help shouldn't I just choose the least expensive program?" but I will address each question separately.

The first of the three questions is the most interesting to me, because:

- A) It is the wrong question, and
- B) It is asked of the wrong person

The correct answer to the first question is, you do not need me or the AIM Program or anyone else to heal you, because, you and only you heal yourself, and that you are indeed capable of healing anything. However, that information, by itself, is probably of little or no use to you.

The real question you must ask is, "Will you heal yourself?", and you must ask it of yourself.

We at EMC<sup>2</sup> have great confidence in your ability to heal yourself while you are on the AIM Program. That is because we have no doubt about your absolute discipline, dedication, determination and focus... because the AIM Program offers you no other option. If you are receiving Energetic Balancing from the AIM Program, you are, at a spiritual level, spending 24 hours a day healing every imbalance you have. That is the miracle of the Spiritual Technology of healing yourself, holographically.

On the other hand, what will you do, on your own, without Energetic Balancing? Will you give the effort required, rather than just the effort you can spare? If healing requires 15 hours a day, will you say, "I'll give it two"? I hope not, because it will not work. Unfortunately, you cannot negotiate with God.

So question 1 is not "can you heal yourself," it is "will you heal yourself". Will you provide the discipline, the focus, the dedication on your own? If your answer is yes, then you do not need a healer or a computer or anything or anyone to remind you or poke and nudge you. Furthermore, the answer to that question, like all the other answers about self-healing, resides only in your consciousness. Look there for your answer.

It is also appropriate to add that I believe that the AIM Program, like any other external means of energetic assistance, is merely an interim measure, and is destined to fall by the wayside when we fulfill our energetic destiny, which is quantum consciousness

In regard to the second question, there is nothing I can say that will convince anyone of the need for and the validity of Energetic Balancing. It is not that there is nothing I'm willing to say, but literally nothing that can be said that will convince anyone. It's not my job to convince. I'm here only as a messenger to provide information. The rest is up to you.

You can not use logic. Scientific ability will not help you a bit. In fact, it is quite possible that your left brain will lead you astray. That is because only instinct can convince you of the validity of the AIM

Program and the need for Energetic Balancing. Its truth must resonate within you and, when it does, you will feel it, hear it or see it as an absolute and obvious truth. Whether the truth is reasonable or not is irrelevant. It need only be true. The words that describe a truth may be simple or they may be eloquent. That too is irrelevant, because either way, they are still words.

Magic occurs when you feel an absolute truth. I believe you must insist on the magic.

The third question is critically important, and, to answer it I must try to remove my ego from the process. If you know me then you understand that is no easy task.

In my experience, there is no technology that does not progress and improve. In most cases, the improvements are obvious and easily measured. I do not believe the AIM Program, the Spiritual Technology we use at EMC<sup>2</sup>, is an exception to that rule. In other words, someday we will encounter an Energetic Balancing program that is more effective than the AIM Program. If it doesn't happen in my lifetime, I still believe it will happen. It's an historic inevitability.

Now, lets talk about airplanes. If we both manufacture airplanes, you may claim yours is superior because it is:

- A) faster
- B) more economical to operate
- C) less expensive to purchase

I believe you'll agree when I say that none of these factors are relevant in the case of a plane that doesn't fly.

Obviously, it's easier to evaluate airplanes than Energetic Balancing programs, because no matter how vitally important Energetic Balancing is to someone, it is possible that the results may not be readily perceived...unless you know exactly how to look for subtle-energy frequencies in consciousness.

Frequencies in consciousness are all we can examine because no energetic balancing device contains or (I hope) even claims to contain either actual germs or actual medications.

When performing energetic evaluations on people allegedly receiving energetic balancing from programs other than the AIM Program, I do not see any evidence of imbalances in consciousness being addressed. I do not see any sign of healing. I don't see any sign of healing of obscure energetic imbalances that have been revealed to EMC<sup>2</sup>, or even of imbalances that have been known since biblical times. The only thing I can see is a plane that doesn't fly.

Ironically and historically, if you don't read this on our web site now, you need only wait a few days and you can read it on many other energetic web sites. In other words, these other programs seem to be following in EMC<sup>2</sup>'s footsteps and claiming our words as their own.

So, where does this leave you? The answer is "At square one." You are left with your intuition. What resonates for you and what does not? There are clues that can help guide you, such as, how do the people advocating these programs look and sound? Or, who is trying to sell you and who is trying to inform you? Ultimately, however, the only answers for you are within you. They are not within me or within anyone else.

I wish you love and light and Godspeed in finding your healing.

For More Information about Energetic Balancing and the AIM Program, visit the EMC<sup>2</sup> web site at www.energeticmatrix.com or contact your EMC<sup>2</sup> Independent Facilitator